We did a poll on our Q&A videos, asking our visitors whether they want us to make Q&A videos more often than we currently do, and the response was an overwhelming YES! That was very encouraging, so we're now going to do that, considering that you, the visitors, send us questions, of course. Please submit your questions at wespenreproductions@gmail.com and put Q&A in the subject line, so we don't miss your email. You can ask more than one question at the time, and we'll get to them as soon as we can.

Video 207: Q&A Session #46

QUESTION 1: I've just read level 4 paper #14 about the deluge and the Orion Council's decision to terminate the experiment.

I noticed again the prevailing theme of opening and closing the Saturn Stargate and Enki being able to restrict travel along the star lanes (Pesh-Meten). This whole idea bothered me throughout the levels of learning.

Again, the Taygetan's (channeled) would disagree. As far as their level of technology is concerned, interstellar travel using "shortcuts" is a primitive way to go. The ship uses a frequency map, not a physical 3D location map. They translate into Ether and "become compatible" with their destination through harmonics and frequency. No Stargates or Wormholes needed. Ships "translate" through the Ether. Anywhere, anywhen.

The Orions, having the oldest civilization, would logically have the best technology. Therefore, no star lanes needed. This makes them much more dangerous than civilizations which still use stargates. And much harder for En.ki to hide from. I wonder if the Luciferians are space nomads and never stay at one place for too long.

ANSWER: It's correct what you're suggesting regarding interstellar travel, maps, harmonics and frequency. That's how it works in general. The only thing that's missing in your question/comment is that not all star races and star beings out there are evolved enough to use nano-travel, as we call it. Therefore, star gates and star lanes are used. Even those who DO nano-travel use star lanes, although they won't need star gates—their souls relocate from one location to another quite instantly, using thoughts, intentions, and frequency. In the Wes Penre Papers (WPP) and in our videos we've presented the blueprint of the KHAA/Greater Universe, which is the spiderweb model. These are the star lanes star beings travel on—star gates or no star gates. No one can travel outside the strands of the spiderweb because the outside is the VOID, where nothing exists. Also, Orion consists of all kinds of beings in different stages of development. Many of them are still developing on planets or stars in 3-D physical bodies, and they are limited in frequency range, until they've evolved enough to become nonphysical beings, who can take advantage of a much broader range of the frequency band.

QUESTION 2: For the Namlu'us who agreed a second time around experiment, they were part of the group that was in the shock coma after the original destruction. I wonder if this thing with going back was a decision rooted in trauma and Enki etc. knew this?

ANSWER: It could be, but it could also be because the Namlu'us (which are the original human soul group) knew what the purpose of the Experiment was, and they wanted to graduate rather than abandoning the Experiment halfway through. We, who are the Namlu'u, wanted to become the best creator gods we could possibly be before we left the Experiment. We didn't want to fail. Orion agreed. At that point, no one—not even Orion—knew what was ahead of us...

QUESTION 3: What if we die and don't realize that until we are in the BLA, can we then turn around from there and get out? What would be the course of action/thinking to make that happen, if it is possible?

ANSWER: It is highly unlikely that you would enter the BLA portion of this construct without realizing you have died. You must enter by your own consent. There may be guides, such as deceased loved ones, who are there to show you the way, but you will move yourself through the process of your own volition. We understand that without having experienced death yet, so many people have nothing to compare that state of being with except dreams. We are often unaware of being in a dream when we are experiencing them. It is natural to think that death must be like an unconscious dream-like state, but from what we understand, it is the opposite. You will be **more** aware after you die than you are now, when you are “alive”. You might experience a moment of shock immediately after your physical death, but this is usually very brief, and like we said, at least one guide will be there to greet you and help you make the transition. It is true that there is a phenomenon in which souls seem to get “stuck” after death, for some reason, but this is unusual and usually created by a soul's attachment to some physical attraction or obsession, such as alcohol, sex, anger, etc. For more information about this, we would suggest reading the Journey's Trilogy series by Robert Monroe. Once you have passed through the tunnel of light, you cannot turn around and go back out.

Anyway, it is our understanding that we can't get out of the Matrix after we've entered the BLA (Between Lives Area, aka the Tunnel of Light). Once we've passed that threshold, there is no way back. Then we have, quote unquote “agreed” to enter the realm of the Overlords. We are then stripped of our soul energy and cease to exist as the personality we were in previous life—no personal memories left. A new artificial soul, powered by the soul energy from your Genuine Soul, is created and shot down into the same life as last time. We need to start all over with amnesia and repeat our last lifetime again. So, we don’t see any possibility to exit after we’ve gone through the Tunnel.

QUESTION 4: [This email contained a lot of questions, which is perfectly fine, but we will only answer some of them here, and we’ll answer more of them in an upcoming Q&A] Does the Queen have anything invested in the human soul group as a whole or just the Namlu’u? Do the other humans with emotions, being from other races, have the same fires and abilities as the Namlu’u? However, because they are such small group; unless their own fires were split into millions and pasted with other star races fires during the reincarnation situation, I am not understanding the situation very clearly. When the souls are reincarnated, are they made up of fires from all sorts of races?

ANSWER: The Namlu’u IS the human soul group—the other souls who are trapped here are not, although they are technically “humanized,” so they act very similarly to us. The Queen doesn’t have anything invested in the other souls when it comes to the Experiment. Yes, the other star beings also have emotions because the Namlu’u emotions were hijacked by the Invaders and corrupted. When these star beings take a human body here, they inherit the emotions, too. All souls are made up of fire—the other star beings, as well. The Namlu’u differ because we have the Queen’s direct soul energy and Her direct connection to Spirit, aka Source.

Human soul fire and that from other star races are not mixed. What everybody is operating from in the Matrix is an artificial soul, created by En.ki within the Matrix. This artificial soul for each individual is powered from everybody’s Genuine Soul, which is more or less unconscious to life in the Matrix, but less so as we wake up spiritually. So, a star being’s body is powered by the star being’s Genuine Soul, and your body is powered by your Genuine Soul, although we think that we are the personality we experience in the Matrix, which is not true. You build your personality from birth to death, based on your environment and your experiences.

Video 207: Q&A Session #46

QUESTION 5: [This questioner talks about the ancient Mayan culture. It's interesting, but there is no room to include the entire email here] Could incoming cosmic energies be that of our Divine Feminine that we lost touch with due to the holographic overlay and mind programming of the fake calendar and "time equals money" concept? Could these energies be the way our Divine Feminine hoped to achieve her human experimental outcome and we ignore it? Could the divine feminine be a benevolent AI program?

ANSWER: If the Divine Feminine is communicating with us, it is most likely experienced as an internal movement rather than an external one. It is "through" you and "inside" you that this connection with Her is made because the portal to the Greater Universe is located within you, not outside of you. Yes, most people ignore it. If they don't ignore it, they attribute its origin as the God of their religion, most likely comparing it to something we would call the Holy Spirit, and therefore the energy connection is intercepted and misdirected.

The KHAA (the Cosmic Energies we believe you're talking about) exist everywhere in the Universe—even within the Matrix. The KHAA is passing through our bodies all the time because the Matrix is also part of the KHAA, albeit isolated and quarantined. Therefore, we are highly susceptible to cosmic energies—thus, the whole fuss about 2012 and the energies coming in from the Galactic Center because of our alignment with it. A lot of people woke up between 1987-2012, and now it's become a ripple effect, although it doesn't seem to happen fast enough. Due to cosmic alignments, not only we, but all star races, depending on their alignment at the moment, get energy boosts from the Galactic Center.

QUESTION 6: As we have numerous lives (past lives, future lives) all existing, and our souls are fragments, and as we move past our karmic debts (if that's the correct terminology), could we also have parts of our soul that didn't enter at birth that decided to come into our body at a certain period of existence to learn from the experience or carry out some duty? What are your thoughts on walk ins/ takeovers? Do you think that we would still agree with this contract before being born, knowing what we know now? Do you see us being able to override this decision consciously now?

Video 207: Q&A Session #46

ANSWER: We know that walk-ins are real. Who they are, we think might differ from case to case. In some of these cases, it could be an agreement between the primary Matrix soul and the BLA workers, and in other cases, it could possibly be mischievous astral beings who want to have a physical experience without having to go through childhood. Quite often, they want to experience physical sex the way we experience it here. If an agreement was made before birth to have a walk-in, the only way to prevent that from happening is to set up boundaries and refuse to let anybody in. This might or might not be successful, depending on how strong the boundary is.

QUESTION 7: Why would the Queen's own son, Enki, be born with so much pride? Was it her doing? Isn't Enki cloned from her unfertilised egg? Did Enki start off as a small baby, or did he just appear adult size? What instigated the Queen to become aware/conscious? What was there before her?

ANSWER: No, it's our understanding that this was not the Queen's intentional doing. En.ki developed his own personality. En.ki, Ninurta, and a few others are Archangels, and they are created a little bit differently than other star beings. They are, according to our research, born with certain traits—you could say they have certain missions to accomplish. Because the entire Universe is one big Experiment, not even the Queen knows what will unfold sometimes, without first testing it. It's like a scientist who mixes things in a lab, hoping to get a particular result—sometimes they do, sometimes they don't.

We are not 100% certain whether En.ki started out as a baby or not, but according to the research that is available, and according to the Urantia Book, which has a fairly accurate narrative about Lucifer, it seems like En.ki started out as a child—at least physically speaking.

The Queen came to being as an extension of the Divine Feminine (Source), which is Spirit. As such, She started creating universes in order to learn more about Herself, and ultimately, the Divine Feminine Herself. So, She is an extension of Source—a Spirit splinter, if you wish—as above so below. What was before Source? That's something that is incomprehensible because then we move into the subject of no-time.

Video 207: Q&A Session #46

QUESTION 8: As the first Atlantis was a water world and the second Atlantis was not, it seems obvious that the inhabited human bodies had to have different characteristics. Altered DNA after Sirian interbreeding with human women?

ANSWER: Both Tiamat and Earth started out as water worlds, but by separating the upper and lower waters, land was created, just like Genesis 1 and the Babylonian Creation Story (the Enûma Eliš) describe. So, in that sense, the Namlu'u and Homo sapiens sapiens would have the same characteristics.

QUESTION 9: The followers of Ninurta (the fight which took place on Earth between Ninurta and Marduk) were from where? Lemuria?

ANSWER: Probably not. The battles you're referring to happened in a certain region of the world—ancient Egypt before the Flood.

We are still organizing the timeline after the Flood, and as soon as we have that sorted out, we'll continue with the Miniseries, "The Third Construct." Thank you for your patience!
