Hello everybody, and welcome to another Q&A! Now, we're in need of more questions, so please submit questions at wespenreproductions@gmail.com and be sure to put "Q&A" in the subject line, so we don't miss your email. Now to today's questions:

QUESTION 1: What are your thoughts on the Bavarian Illuminati? Do you still believe that benevolent secret societies exist? How much influence do they have on society and in terms of being a force that goes against the 13 family bloodlines?

ANSWER: Yes, they still exist, and they were on the Internet until maybe 6-7 years ago. I was in contact with them then and exchanged emails with them. They are against the Rothschilds and the Monarchies of the world, and they want to create a world of meritocracy, where each person can become whatever they are fit to be. Caregivers are to recognize the children's talents and passions and help them develop these to use in their profession during adult life. The Bavarians are of the mindset that every person has their place in society, and society will thrive when we all are doing what we want to do and follow our passions. They also want our children to be taken away from their parents to be raised in communities where people are educated to raise children—parents of today only traumatize their children and destroy their dreams. Until people can raise children properly, they will not be allowed to do so. There is more, of course, but these are some highlights. The Bavarian Illuminati were the ones who instigated the French and Russian Revolutions, by the way. Adam Weishaupt, the Founder of this secret society, was a good friend of Thomas Jefferson's. Correspondence between the two still exist.

They do not have any real influence in today's society—something they admitted to themselves when I communicated with them. They went online to educate people, but because they are called the Illuminati, people started attacking them, so they took down their website. What they are promoting sounds good on the most part, but they are still ready and willing to use violence to accomplish their goals.

If you want to be part of a group of benevolent helpers, then seek out people who are doing good and join them. There's no special ancestry required to participate. The same goes for making the choice to do harm. No special ancestry required for that, either. In this life, we all are faced with the same choice – participate in a way that nurtures life or participate in a way that condemns life, both for others and for ourselves.

QUESTION 2: I heard that the Orion Group and the Orion Empire are not the same. Maybe I even read it in one of your papers, I can't remember. If they are not the same, who are the Orion Group and where are they located? In Sophia's universe or one of the Aeons' heavens?

ANSWER: The "Orion Group" was first mentioned in the RA Material, from what we understand. It refers to the AIF/Overlords/Archons. En.ki/Yaldabaoth started out in Orion in the beginning of this Universe before he was cast down in "Lucifer's Rebellion." The same goes for the rest of the Archons/Overlords. Thus, we have what the RA Material calls the Orion Group/the Invaders/5th Dimension Negative Beings. So, the Orion Group/the Archons are currently mainly residing in the 7 Heavens (the solar system and the astral) and in the lower 5 Heavens (Hell), where Earth is now located. They do still have a few outposts in Orion (the 8th Heaven), as discussed in the Wes Penre Papers (WPP). They invaded a few star constellations that they are still in possession of.

QUESTION 3: Did the animals Namlu'u lived with as guardians of the living library on their first planet have spirit? If they did, is it possible the animals perhaps also agreed to accompany us to Enki/Yaldabaoth's experiment? Alternatively, could Sophia have put a small amount of spirit into the animals Yaldabaoth made to help us in some way? If animals do not have spirit, why would they also be used for energy harvest by Enki or Archons in sacrifices and rituals as it seems they do? Is fear as an emotion only tied to earthly soul and not spirit? Do you know the nature of the souls of animals here and more about where their souls go on body death? I recall you mentioned in a previous Q&A that they go into a cloud. Have you learned more information on this?

ANSWER: It is our understanding that animals are not spirited in the sense that we are. They do have souls and a mind, however, and these are the things we love about them, and we can interact with them on a more conscious level than we can with plants, for example. Animals don't have the same awareness level as we do (although dolphins and whales come close in a little different way, from what it seems), and from what we understand it was the same on Tiamat. The soul is made of fire/energy, and that's what the Archons harvest. They harvest the soul, not the Spirit, although Spirit is "attached" to the soul, or vice versa, depending on how we look at it. And yes, fear is only attached to this universe—the Kenoma/Matrix. There is no fear in the Pleroma/Spiritual Universe.

It's my (Wes') understanding that the animal souls get recycled, similar to us. The only reference we've seen on where animal souls go after death is from Barbara Marciniak's "Pleiadians." They say that they go a different route compared to us—they go to a "cloud," where their energies accumulate, and they reincarnate from there. We're not sure if all their soul energy is just gathered in a huge pot, or if they evolve individually during subsequent incarnations, or if the evolution only happens on a physical level, i.e. the limit of how much consciousness a certain animal has depends on their genetics. Just like with us, it could be both.

From what I (Ariel) understand, animals have a type of soul that is very instinctive and rote. However, animals also have the ability to absorb and merge with the soul-energy of humans and other animals around them. When we have a beloved animal companion, we give our soul energy to that animal and it becomes merged with our own soul energy. It becomes a part of our soul-connection, for lack of a better description. This, obviously, does not happen for all animals – only those we have chosen to share our lives with. You wouldn't have a soul connection with a wild racoon, for example.

Also, if we have experienced the death of a beloved companion and then choose to bring a new companion into our lives, the lingering soul energy of the deceased will be felt by the new addition and they can merge. Sometimes, our new companion has eerily similar vibes as the previous one, and this is why. The new one has absorbed the energy of the deceased one that is still lingering around us. We can't say whether this is true or not, of course, but it's all just energy and based on my own experiences, this fits the bill for me. I didn't make this conclusion for myself – I read about it, but I do not remember where. It seemed to answer my questions, so I didn't research it further.

QUESTION 4: I don't want to get into the why's and wherefores of what is happening in this dystopian world. It is clear to me that the 'plandemic' is a diversion from the real agenda. That of ushering in a New World Totalitarian order. What concerns me is that if we are forcibly injected with gene altering voxxines and are the unwilling victims of the covertly created weaponised planet, will we actually have the free will or strength to say thanks but no thanks and exit this underworld? I can think of nothing worse than being trapped in this Hell for eons with these misanthropic, insane megalomaniacs.

ANSWER: You literally decide whether you will be trapped here or not. Each individual only has their own mind. Nothing can happen to them if it's not existing in their own mind and he/she has agreed to it. No one can force anybody to stay here after body death, for example. We reincarnate because in the astral, that's what we have been manipulated into thinking must be normal routine. It is routine, however—it's a program. If we do something over and over, we train our minds to see it as normal. This is why we are bombarded with memes and repetitive fearful information from the Media—they even call it "the new normal." After a certain time of repetition, the mind will think what previously was abnormal is now normal. So long as you keep that in mind, no one can force you to stay here. This is why manipulation is the only thing that works to change a person's mindset. And it can only be done if the person consents to it. People consent to things all the time that is not beneficial because they don't understand how this works. No one is imprisoned here on Earth, unless we think we are. We need to look into our own minds. What perspectives and beliefs do we hold? After all, that's what shapes our reality—good or bad.

One way to see it and consider is this world and how we perceive it depends on our current state of being and perspective. If you have a dystopia-like state of mind, then what you "see" around you and experience in your reality will feel dystopian. If you believe that the planet is being weaponized against you, then it will be. You will become sick or experience perpetual injury. If you are intent to believe the "worst" of everything, then you WILL experience the worst that you can possibly imagine. IMAGINE is the key here. If you don't want to experience these things, stop imagining them for yourself. It really is that simple. Stop going to places on the internet that promote this kind of thinking. This is "group-think" that is intentionally designed to keep people reactive and in a fear-based state of mind. Many people get excited by fear and "doom". We recently heard it described as "chaos junkie", and that description fits pretty well. Adrenaline is as addictive as heroin, and when we are used to having it flood through our body, we seek experiences that will give us more of it. This goes for people who love to take risks for the thrill of it, such as skydiving, but it also goes for those who suffer from a lot of anxiety. What is produced when we are in a state of fear? Adrenaline. As you stop trying to give yourself more adrenaline "fixes", you will go through a period of withdrawal, but if you push through it with the intention to heal your mind, after you come out the other side you will look back and think what a relief it is that the world isn't as bad as you were believing it to be, and you will see the fear-mongering for what it really is. It's a choice. We can choose to feel bad or we can choose to feel good. We can't concern ourselves over the decisions of others. Everyone has their own experiences and choices to make. We can only choose for ourselves.

QUESTION 5: What is the symbology represent on your video? The snake like creature with the sun/star/crown on its head and the half moon and the sun/star beside its body?

ANSWER: That is an artist's interpretation of Yaldabaoth. It's very old and based on the description and symbology given by early Gnostics. If you research Yaldabaoth, you will find this image everywhere.
