Hello again, and I hope everybody is doing well. I am still working on the next part of the Antediluvian/Aryan video, but it is most probably coming up next. In the meantime, let's do a Q&A. Please send more questions, if you have any, to wespenreproductions@gmail.com and put Q&A in the subject line so I don't miss it in the stream of emails. It's always okay to send multiple questions. Here are today's questions:

QUESTION 1: I know the traumatic wiping of our memories with the recycling process is archontic. However, regarding mind, soul, ego, and individual identity, do you think that the whatever strips us of our individual identity is archontic? It seems to me that expansion and creativity requires individual perspective. I sense a loss if that is stripped away. What are your thoughts?

ANSWER: This is a good question. It is my understanding, based on conclusions from my own research, that we have archontic forces within our bodies. So, the procedure is that we are "shot down" from the recycling center into a physical body, and that's when the amnesia happens. We go from the astral into solid 3-D. Although we have soul memories from previous incarnations buried inside us, we usually don't remember them. So, we could say we are born with a "blank slate" that will then be programmed by other people and the environment and our reactions to the same to a large degree. That, in combination with ancestral cell memories and unconscious/subconscious soul memories, we act and react. The soul is innately creative—even with the amnesia considered, so whatever our experiences, we have personal creative abilities, although they feel restricted here, compared to the abilities we have when not in solid 3-D bodies. Then, we can nano-travel and create with our minds and immediately manifest the creations.

I also believe we are incarnating over and over in the same loop—at least most of the time. There is always a chance we change loops sometimes due to whatever circumstances, but I think the norm is the loop. So, we have built our individuality across the lines of time to become who we are. We add and subtract to that each lifetime, although we are not consciously aware of it because of amnesia.

So, to answer your main question more directly, once we are here on Earth, it's a mix of archontic influence and soul development and increase or decrease of consciousness that determines our personality. As I wrote in the Wes Penre Papers (WPP), the tinkering with our genetics was mainly that the Archons "added" a part of themselves to us, which is the archontic attachment the Gnostic texts talk about. This influences us; but it's up to us to override it to lesser or greater degree to become more or less creative. Usually, it's we humans who are doing things to each other, ignorant of who we are, dramatizing our coping mechanisms in life.

QUESTION 2: I have been thinking lately about the Singularity. How is it going to play out in "poor" regions where people do not have access to computers, cell phones and so on? I mean, there are still many people that are illiterate and have not even touched technology. How do they get sucked into the Singularity?

ANSWER: Another good question. In 2015-16, I wrote a book called, "Synthetic Super Intelligence and the Transmutation of Humankind...", which can be found on Amazon. Among an array of other things, I brought up the Third World countries and the distribution of technology. Back then, smartphones were dropped off to tribes in the jungles, who didn't even have toilets or running water—but they gave them phones. The EL-ite are preparing everybody for the Singularity. Of course, it's much easier to spread technology in the so-called civilized countries, and we will be the forerunners for the Singularity.

Personally, I think that the Singularity will hit much sooner in our parts of the world than in less developed parts—that seems obvious—but eventually everybody will be transmuted, if the EL-ite gets it their way. This may be the reason why Ray Kurzweil said the goal for the Singularity to be in full effect is 2045. He might have included the undeveloped countries in that statement. In the developed world, we are almost there.

QUESTION 3: I've been hearing the term "evil spirit(s)." Is there such a thing? Isn't it the soul that can be evil and not spirit?

ANSWER: Yes, it's a misnomer—a confusion between soul and Spirit.

QUESTION 4: In your most recent post on Gnosticism, you said that we go where we are ready to go and that we still need to work to attain gnosis. Please could you expand on this as if our spirit is source then once we die, have we not already attained perfection?

ANSWER: The question is, what is "perfection?" It's subjective. We are not striving to be perfect (there is no such thing), but whoever we are on a scale from pure evil to very compassionate, we operate on different vibrations and frequencies. It's not that we are denied access to the Spiritual Realm to be punished for not being perfect—it's more up to us whether we qualify or not, depending on how we vibrate. A block of cement has a much lower vibration than air, for example. Thus, there is a separation between the two if we use a metaphor.

QUESTION 5: Can a soul incarnate into any dimension?

ANSWER: Theoretically—yes. In the WPP, I wrote about Avatars, i.e., soul bodies/light-bodies. We have more than one. If you search on YouTube for William Buhlman, who is an experienced Out of Body traveler, doing it for 45 years, he talks about this in his latest video. Each body has a different vibration and can operate in different dimensions. However, in whatever dimension the soul operates, there is a physical reality as well, just like here. The soul can also travel between dimensions if mature enough. If this is the 3rd Dimension and you go to the 6th Dimension, for example, there is a light-body/Avatar corresponding to the 6th, and you can experience that dimension being as physical as ours, but much less dense, which makes it much easier to create there. Humans, however, have amnesia, and if they are not educated in metaphysics when they die, they tend to be drawn into the tunnel of light and reincarnate here again. They don't know they have other choices and can refuse to cooperate.

QUESTION 6: If we have multiple soul fragments of ourselves incarnating across the lines of time and one of these fragments ends up leaving the patrix, what will happen to the remaining soul fragments? Will they automatically be pulled out as well? Or would we have to wait for our other fragments to leave the Matrix/Patrix also?

ANSWER: The soul consists of trillions of small bioelectrical fires. Each fire has the memories of the whole. So, if you send x number of fires away from you, like remote viewers do, each of these separate fires still have the memories of the entire soul. If the soul is split and reincarnate in different time periods, each split has her own experiences and becomes her own identity/individual. So, if your name is Jim and you go through the Grid after death, you don't need to collect the other lifetime fragments of Mary and Peter. You are already whole the way you are as a soul personality by the time you die—warts and all. The other soul fragments left behind have already become their own different souls and have their own journey.

There are pockets of time, like the one we're in right now, when consciousness and soul awareness can expand quickly if the soul is so inclined. This also affects past and future because linear time is an illusion. There have been other pockets of time in the past and in the future where humanity has progressed. Since we are a mass consciousness—an interconnected soul group—we affect others across timelines when we, as individuals, change ourselves from within. Because time is an illusion, it doesn't matter if a soul split lives in the 1500s or 57 BC—souls can be affected everywhere. This is how we, as a soul group, can resolve our problem of being manipulated here. The multiverse is fluid, and past and present are not set-in stone but change when consciousness changes. It's all just stories, and they can be changed. You can take a book someone wrote and rewrite it, and now you have another story just as “real,” although the original story is still there as a memory—both exist simultaneously.
