I will post another Q&A here. I have a few subjects I want to discuss in future videos, and I was supposed to have presented the first topic now. However, I've spent a lot of the week setting up my Patrons on TELEGRAM, and I've been busy with a few other things, as well, so there has not been any time to focus on these ideas.

The Q&A videos, which seem to be quite popular, are perfect to post while I use additional time to look into different subjects, and I can still provide material to you on a regular basis for discussion in comment sections, etc.

So please provide me with more questions at wespenreproductions@gmail.com. And make sure to put "Q&A" in the subject line, so I won't miss your email. You can ask more than one question if you like.

QUESTION 1: Please explain the phenomenon "Déjà vu."

ANSWER: I think most people who listen to this have heard the term, but I'll explain briefly: Déjà vu is, for instance, when you go to a place you might never have been to before, but still, you get a quick flash in your mind of recognition—a sudden feeling you actually have been there before.

In my previous research, I have mentioned this phenomenon. It's definitely real—I have experienced it myself, as well. I have talked about recycling a lot, and if my theory and conclusion are correct, we get recycled into the same lifetime over and over to clear our “karma.” This karma is imposed on us in the Afterlife during the Life Review process. We are told we need to go back to Earth and do it all over again, until we get things “right.” This triggers shame and guilt in the soul, who then will usually agree to this, although it's a completely fabricated process, instigated by the Archons to keep us recycled here, using our freewill against us. They don't tell us we have to come back, but the way it's presented, they push our buttons so that we voluntarily return here.

When we return to Earth, we have amnesia. We have done the same things before in the same environment, but we don't remember. However, on rare occasions, we might get flashes of memories from past lives at the same place we are at in the present moment because we have been there before in previous incarnations. If this theory is correct, it also explains Déjà vu.

QUESTION 2: With a thought, focus and intention we see ourselves out through the Grid and into the 7 Heavens or realm of the Archons. Will there automatically be distractions, beings etc. to try and stop you, or will a thought to a location instantly take you there? You say it's best to ignore any being that approaches you. What about locations in the Milky Way Galaxy? Orion is recommended by some while Sagittarius or Andromeda may be options. A few places in the Milky Way Galaxy I know to avoid is the Sirius star system, Alpha Draconis, and Ursa Minor to name a few. Is it still highly unstable in Sirius today you think? En.ki has his footstool in the entire Pleiades, so that place is not so attractive, but what do you think of these places?

ANSWER: When you exit through the Grid, you will pass the 7 Heavens, which are guarded by Archons (see the Gnostic text, “The Secret Book of John”). This is why I've been emphasizing that we need to stay focused and not be distracted by anything on our way out. Remember, Yaldabaoth is also known as a “trickster god,” so he can trick you into thinking you meet someone or something that will distract you and catch you in the loop again. So, I repeat one more time: whatever happens and whomever you might meet, pay no attention—just use your intention to leave.

Regarding the different star systems and constellations that you mention, why do you want to think yourself to any of those? Yes, they are all located in Orion, but there are wars and battles going on in some of them, whether they are in the possession of the Archons and their allies or of the higher Divine forces, to throw that term out there. Of course, it's anyone's choice where to go, but this is how I will do it: when I die and enter the astral, I will spot a hole in the Grid, and immediately, and with a focused intention, think myself exiting. Because the astral and the Universe in general is thought responsive, it will happen immediately. Included in my intention and thought will also be to go to the highest possible aspect of myself. If that will be Orion or the Pleroma remains to be seen, but with that intention, I will reach the destination that is appropriate for me.

Tho'th the Archon, in his teachings (the Hermetic teachings) say that the Heavens are guarded, and you need to pay toll to pass them. And you will be asked questions, like the little pigs who are told by the troll under the bridge to answer his questions before they can cross the bridge. The Grimm brothers wrote that interesting story. This seems to be correct, also according to other sources, such as the Seth Material and the Robert Monroe's out of body travels, but this brings me back to the same thing I've always said, "don't pay attention to anything on the way. Even if you are asked questions, ignore it. They have no right to hold you if you implement your freewill to leave and stick to it. That doesn't mean they can't try.

QUESTION 3: I, Wes, will add this as a general question because I get quite a few inquires about the WingMakers and Ashayana Deanne, the Guardian Alliance, and her Ascension Process. The question is often whether the collective soul group, exiting the Matrix or going through a mutual ascension, respectively, will get us to Orion or keep us contained within the Matrix. I'll try to answer that now from my perspective. Although I have decided not to comment too much on other people's research and experiences in these Q&As, I will give a general perspective on these group events and not only those of the WingMakers and Ms. Deanne.

ANSWER: Those who say that we need to leave the Matrix/Kenoma as a soul group, where everyone leaves at the same time, are, in principle, not incorrect. That's how it was supposed to be. However, that requires that the entire human soul group has awoken to the fact that we are in a Matrix and need to move on. This is, as we know, not the case. Therefore, it's become a personal journey. Each person does their homework and concludes that it is time to exit because they are spiritually ready to. If we wait for everyone to wake up, it will only trap us in the system again, and with the full effects of the Singularity approaching, it's not a good idea.

Regarding whether the teachings, where they say that we need to wait for everybody before we can exit: this information is not coming from Orion. I will leave it at that.

However, it's of course anyone's choice, as usual, what they want to do. There might be highly spiritually connected people who prefer to come back here in hope to further help, and that's their choice. Will they have success with that? It's a question impossible to answer. There are no absolutes. Some souls might be trapped here again, while others might have a better chance to accomplish their goal. But who knows who will experience what? The Gnostic texts tell us that if we exit and are vibrationally able to access the 9th Heaven, we will be offered the choice to go back and help out if we wish or continue to the Pleroma in Spirit. If we choose the former, we get another lifetime here as spiritual teacher, and when we die, we go to the Pleroma. I think that sounds like a better choice because there is a greater chance that we get guidance in the 9th Heaven how to navigate the harsh conditions during our last lifetime here.

QUESTION 4: If certain things already happened and there is no time in the KHAA and the Pleroma, it also means the battle between Enki and Sofia already took place. The invasion of Orion would have already happened. If this is true, who won in that case? Or am I understanding this wrong?

ANSWER: You are saying that “it has already taken place,” and that statement in itself includes time per definition, so it’s a complex matter. The concept of time can seem complicated because we humans are so stuck in thinking in terms of linear time. It’s not that time does not exist elsewhere, but if you are a creator god in Orion, for example, you create your own time, related to your own “local” creations, so to speak. If you would create your own world, you can create your own time that’s specific to your creation—or no time at all. Even in more general terms, let’s say there is life on a planet around Alpha Centauri. How long will their days be? It depends on how long it takes for the planet to orbit their star and their axis (thinking in NASA terms). Also, do these beings chop up time in hours and minutes like we do? Probably not.

When it comes to creation and that everything was created at once from the Monad’s/Source’s perspective is highly speculative because it is literally impossible to know what the Monad truly is. That is clearly stated in the Gnostic texts, and I think most of us agree that it’s too abstract for us to comprehend. One theory that has been tossed around for ages is the concept of wheels within wheels. Briefly, this means that universes evolve on different levels or dimensions, simultaneously, each one being one wheel of “movement” within another wheel of movement from the highest to the lowest, to use terms we can understand. Even if some kind of outcome was originally conceived of, the fact that each living thing in a universe contributes to changes that are not always predictable also indicates that nothing is set in stone. This sounds like a contradiction, doesn’t it? Or perhaps an oxymoron or a paradox. And it is. When we stumble upon paradoxes, it doesn’t always mean one of the opposed terms in the paradox is false—they can both be true, even when they seem to contradict each other.

So, has Orion already won? Maybe they have and maybe they haven’t at the same “time?” Which option will we choose? If we really want to dig deep, how many intelligent beings are there in this Universe? A quadrillion, quintillion? Sure, from a certain perspective that is true. From another perspective the answer is that there is only ONE, and that is you. What do you want to happen? What will you make happen? See? One perspective tells you that there are an almost infinite number of beings in the Universe, while another part of you might tell you there is only ONE being, and that’s you. What you experience is all inside of you—the rest is a projection. There we have a paradox again. Many against one. Both may be true.

QUESTION 5: Occultists speak of "A New Atlantis" and you mention this in your Singularity e-book. If Atlantis has been revived and established for the last 245 years (En.ki's vision) then what does this mean? One thing that I can see is history repeating itself. In your e-book you state that Homo sapiens sapiens (The Thinking Man) is just a temporary species En.ki created to obtain his goal of a New Atlantis. It is very sobering, and looking at the world today, especially learning about how the Elite operate, it makes you think: does En.ki even care in the slightest about us, his creation!? What do you think about these things currently?

ANSWER: Yes, history repeats itself, mostly because we humans are still living in the past and are reliving our lives through the recycling process. We are still children on many levels. On one level, we, as a collective, act like children who never grow up to adulthood, and on a larger scale, we are still children of the previous Atlantis, which we didn't grow up from, either. This can easily be taken advantage of by those who know our history before the Flood and are of the El-ite.

It was Barbara Marciniak's "Pleiadians" who talked a lot about this in recent years, and how En.ki encouraged the El-ite to create the New Atlantis in America. It was also "anticipated" by Sir Francis Bacon in the 1600s. He wrote a lot about the coming of the New Atlantis. The old Atlantis, according to legend, ended badly because of misused energy and technology. If we look around us, isn't that what's happening now, as well? History sure repeats itself.

You're asking whether En.ki/Yaldabaoth really cares about us humans. Yes, he does, but not in the sense we might think about it. He's not the cozy father figure that will keep us safe as his children, thank goodness. If he were, we would certainly never grow up. He cares, but for his own purposes—for his own survival and power. He needs us to be able to function properly—he needs our Light/Spirit, something he himself is lacking and is also jealous of. He sees himself as God, and how come humans have something that God doesn't? That's not acceptable to him. Please read the Gnostic texts for more information on this.¹

Many see En.ki as evil. The truth, which is also supported by the Gnostic texts, is that he is both good and evil—he's duality. For example, there are things Yaldabaoth is guilty of when it comes to manipulating and tricking humans, and we consider that evil because it makes us suffer. So, from our perspective it is evil. Then, if we jump into Yaldabaoth's shoes, we see that from his perspective, it's a matter of survival and to maintain his position as the perceived Godhead—something he was appointed to from the beginning. He's playing his role.

Everything boils down to self-responsibility. Yaldabaoth has been blamed by humans for many things he never did, as well. We humans did it to ourselves—and we still do. Most of the bad things that happen on this planet are not Yaldabaoth's direct responsibility—it's ours. We humans need to stop acting like children and grow up. If Yaldabaoth completely ignored us from here on, still not much would change on this planet, unless we change. There is no other way. We don't need him to act badly.

The Pleiadians talk about trying to change the timeline because they say that in the future, we humans, as cyborgs, will invade the Pleiades and create terror there. The Pleiades is Yaldabaoth's constellation—currently.

Here is a thought: even if Yaldabaoth wanted to create a new Atlantis, and he provided us with some technology, etc., it was up to us how to use it. Is the Singularity Yaldabaoth's idea, or is it a repetition of the Tower of Babel, where humans sought the Immortality of the "gods?" Isn't the Singularity all about physical immortality? Are we humans doing this to ourselves, without the involvement and support from Yaldabaoth and his Archons? Just something to ponder.

QUESTION 6: Is the plandemic a step needed for us to get used to social distancing and not form relationships and bonds as to prepare us for life in The Singularity? Speaking of the Singularity; what is the initial thing that will happen?

ANSWER: The answer to your first question is yes. To me, it's the obvious reason, based on all the information out there and my own research into the Singularity. It's all about the Singularity.

The answer to your second question is that the initial thing happened a long time ago. The way I see it, it started with the personal computers (PCs). Next step was the Internet and the cellphones, turning into smartphones. Then, it was 9/11—an attempt to put most people on the same timeline by creating horrific trauma in the mass population, making everyone concentrate on one single event. Since then, the EL-ite has done their best to keep us on this timeline by instigating new threats and terror in small and large doses. Now, of course, we have the Wuhan thing, which introduced social distancing. After that we have the vaccines, containing mRNA, altering our DNA, and nanobots. We will then be required to boost our so-called immunity against a non-proven virus with recurrent vaccinations. If we don't get the boosters, we lose our right to travel and mingle with other people, and we will not be accepted on the job market. That's how they try to get us.

So, as you can see, we are already well into the Singularity process. The initial thing happened decades ago, but the planning goes back much, much longer than that. We can see it in sf-novels from the beginning of the 20th Century, as an idea. H.G. Wells, for example, was obviously part of this and had inside information, and Dr. Zbigniew Brzezinski wrote a book about this in the early 1970s. He was a major insider, as many people know.
