Everything in this universe of time is happening in cycles; some call it wheels within wheels. We have the Great Cycle, which is about 26,000 years long that I discussed in the Wes Penre Papers, (WPP), denoting one orbit around the Galactic Center. This long cycle is further divided into four smaller cycles of about 6,400 years, and then we have, of course, the Zodiacal Cycle, which is divided into what we call the 12 Ages, such as Pisces, Aries, and Capricorn, etc. We learn that Earth is rotating around the Milky Way Galaxy and the Zodiac, but I would argue that it's the other way around. However, that's for a future video.

We humans here on Earth are deeply affected by the rotation of the skies above us, whether it is what we call the Milky Way Galaxy, the Zodiac, or the celestial bodies we can see in the sky, such as what we call planets, our sun, and our moon. We often use astrology as a tool to connect and bond with other people we like; we might say, "Hey, I'm a Libra, too!" What we mean by that is that you and I are potentially alike and would perhaps have things in common. So, most people know that astrology does have some impact on our lives. Little do most people understand, though, how much impact it has, not only on a personal level but as a collective.

In the WPP, I talked about the nano-second. This was the approximate time between 1987-2012, when a mass awakening of humankind started and has continued since. That is not a coincidence, and it's not that I or somebody else is "prophetic;" it has to do with the cycles I was just talking about.

We are currently leaving the Age of Pisces and going into the Age of Aquarius, which will be a very important Age for us humans because in this Age, we need to make a very important choice. That choice has to do with the Singularity versus exiting our realm of existence that we call the Matrix/Patrix/Kenoma/The Seven Heavens. This Age will be twofold; here two kinds of people are meeting; the ones who are moving toward Spirit and those who are moving toward Darkness. We could say we live in a kind of "middle ground." This is why we see people waking up left and right, while others seem to go in the opposite direction, following Elon Musk, Dr. Ray Kurzweil, and the rest of the Singularity crew. This is the Age where material technology and spirituality meet. I get tons of emails from people who are devastated because they are trying to wake up their family, spouses, children, or dear friends to no avail. They don't understand because the people they want to wake up are good people. Why can't they see?

This is a more complex question than it might look like at first, and we are not going into details about that at this point in time, but I think we can say with some certainty that humans are at different stages in their soul evolution, and we all need to go where we are supposed to go. If someone embraces technology and the Singularity, it is their path, and sometimes there is nothing we can do about it, as little as they can change us from going in a spiritual direction into a material existence which excludes Spirit.

Although we might grieve that a soul we love chooses the material path, nothing lasts forever. One of the purposes with the Singularity is to create physical immortality, where our technological cyborg bodies will live "forever," and death is obsolete, but nothing lasts forever. Time, for a soul, is irrelevant from a higher perspective. If a soul is stuck in the Singularity for let's say 1,000-2,000 years, it is not even a blink of an eye for the soul, which is essentially immortal in our universe. Although it might seem very tough from our 3D human perspective not to be able to convince our near and dear ones, we need to let go if there is no response because at this moment in time, they are on a different path. Still, in the future, that will change...

But what about the Consummation of the Age we have been discussing, mentioned in the Gnostic texts and in the Bible as the Resurrection? Aren't we going toward a destruction of the material realm as we know it? The Bible talks about Christ reigning over a Heaven on Earth for a thousand years, but what does that mean? We know by now that the Bible is based on other ancient texts written down much longer ago, where they talk about a Golden Age, where the lion (wolf) sleeps with the lamb. Because everything goes in cycles, will the past now become the future? And where would this Golden Age be located? What does the Consummation of the Age mean?

This is all part of new research and material I'm taking part of, and it's a very interesting journey. I don't know exactly yet where it will take me, but it's potentially huge and continuously answers a lot of questions I have personally had, and which can possibly expand our consciousness to a new level. And what I've mentioned here is just the beginning; there is so much to learn. I will of course share my journey and conclusions when I'm ready to, although it might take a while to gather the puzzle pieces.

We are all affected by the movements of the heavenly bodies and the fixed stars and star constellations of the Zodiac. Each Age has its own level of consciousness, and when it comes to the history we have learned, and as far as it is correct (and most of it isn't), there have been golden ages, middle ages, and dark ages, where little spirituality was present at all, except in a very few people. For the rest, it was completely veiled.

Now, however, we live in an era of awakening, and that has to a large degree to do with the Zodiacal movement and our position in relation to the Galactic Center. We are now lined up with the Galactic Center, as well as being at the beginning of a new Age, Aquarius. So, the energies are in our favor, and for those who are waking up do so by reconnecting with their Higher Self, as discussed elsewhere on this channel and in the WPP. But what is the Higher Self, and how do we know we are connected?

We know we are connected because we are waking up; that is the most certain sign of connection. So, if you're waking up, you are connected. You wouldn't listen to or read this if you weren't.

Many people say they are in communication with their Higher Self, and they describe that process differently. Some say it's an actual telepathic communication between the human individual and their Higher Self, while other say it's just a "knowingness" without communication. So, which is it? Or is it both?

Let's think about this for a moment. Those who have done their research know that the soul is multidimensional. As souls, we live on different levels of existence, i.e., dimensions, simultaneously, but our main focus is currently in this Third Dimension. So, we could technically say that our Higher Self can be both a higher dimensional part of our soul, and it would ultimately be Spirit. Although I think it might be possible to have a telepathic conversation with a higher dimensional part of our own soul, comprised of thoughts, and even words, that kind of communication is not the most direct channel across the dimensions and to Spirit, as I see it.

The deepest connection between our 3D selves and our Higher Selves, whether it's the Oversoul of Spirit, is just a stream of consciousness and knowingness, respectively. Let's say you are creating something, e.g., you are writing an essay or a book; maybe a piece of music, you're painting on a canvas, or you're involved in some other creative activity, and you are very inspired, and things just flow and go your way. Afterward, you look at your creation and you wonder, "How did I do that? I didn't know I could do that." This is because there was a stream of consciousness flowing through your body when you were creating, and it's almost like your piece of work is creating itself. That's an open channel to your multidimensionality, which is a connection to a higher vibration of your soul. So, it's soul related, as I see it, and as I experience it. We get access to a broader range of the frequency band.

And how do we know we are reconnected with Spirit? Well, this is my own experience, so take it for what it is. To me, it's when I "know" something in my "heart" to be true, even though I can't prove it scientifically, or perhaps not even logically, the way we humans define logic. It's just a knowingness that is built into my being that I reconnect to. It is often accompanied with a feeling of expansion that will stay with me after the point of this partial Gnosis. When experiencing the stream of consciousness I explained earlier, it's in the moment, so long as I keep that stream of energy going. Then it stops. The Spiritual knowledge/Gnosis remains a part of me and does not stop when I stop thinking about my experience. So, the soul connection is like opening a water tap "above my head," and a stream of consciousness flows through. Then, the tap closes, and I can observe what it did. In the case of Spiritual connection, there is no tap. It's just an expansion of knowingness that can't be explained; it's just suddenly there and becomes a new expanded part of me.

So, for me, words and thoughts are not involved at all when Gnosis happens—it's just an expansion of knowledge and wisdom that becomes a part of my current experience here on Earth, while the stream of consciousness, although not consisting of words and thoughts either, will be transformed into both thoughts and words while receiving it in my 3D state, e.g., when I write a book or an article like this one. I experience it as a stream of energy flowing through me, and I transform that energy into very rapid thoughts that become words on the computer when I type them.

Water is an essential part of the universe and of ourselves. I often get ideas in the shower or when taking a bath, which is when I am in water. Then, I can stand or sit there, thinking, and suddenly I get epiphanies. Although these epiphanies might seem like thoughts in my head, I can also feel a stream of consciousness entering first, and the epiphany actually happens before I think it, if this makes any sense. Has anyone experienced the same, or similar thing?

The question is, are these epiphanies always correct? It depends on what we mean by “correct.” They can be clues, but when we’re talking about soul levels, it’s always based on experience, and experience is, as we know, personal. So, one could say I sometimes “channel” my truth, as I have and am experiencing it on a multidimensional level. If you would have an epiphany on the same subject, it might be slightly different because you “remember” and experience things from your perspective.

As I said, these are my personal experiences and how I perceive them, and if you perceive these things differently, please tell us in the comment section below this video. I am very interested to hear about your experiences on these subjects, regardless of what your experiences are.
