

Video 269: Long-Term Effects of the Vaccines

So much has been said about what the virus is and isn't and what the vaccines are doing to us. When people think they "get it," a new theory pops up, and many people jump on that bandwagon, and so it goes, back and forth, and the confusion increases.

This is nothing new. It happens in all areas of research when it comes to figuring things out in this Patrix/Matrix, so in reality, not much is actually being figured out--at least not in the sense that it will seriously disturb the order and the status quo.

Some say that the vaccines will change our DNA forever, others say the vaccines are given to reduce the population, others say it makes men and women infertile, while another group might say they will make you into A.I. mindless robots.

So, what is true?

Well, from all the research I've done over the years, I would say, a little bit of all the above. But not all of it is on the actual agenda, in my opinion. So, I will give you my current take on all this, and I will try to use Occam's Razor to conclude the simplest potential reason or reasons for the vaccines and why they are pushed so hard.

It goes back to the book I wrote a few years ago called, Synthetic Super Intelligence and the Transmutation of Humankind, which can be found at Amazon.com (link in the transcript to this video). If we consider what I wrote in that book as being the agenda of the EL-ite, the reason for the vaccines becomes fairly clear. But first, let us recap some of the things the movers and shakers have done so far:

For years, people have talked about chemtrails and what they might potentially contain. What has been sprayed upon us? Many of us (me included) have concluded that for one, they contain nanobots and other types of nanotechnology, which we then will breathe in and get into our system. Chemtrails have been common more or less on a planetary scale, so most people on Earth do have nanobots in their system.

Moreover, there is something else most people forget about the chemtrails, or they may not have thought about it because they haven't listened to Dr. Ray Kurzweil, the EL-ite's main spokesperson for the Singularity Agenda. He clearly says in his book and in lectures that not only do they want to create cyborgs of the human body, but they also want nature to become A.I. and based on nano-tech rather than let it remain what we call "biological." He says that even stones will be artificial in the end because the entire planet needs to be transformed or terraformed.

I believe that the chemtrails also affect the forests, rivers, lakes, and other living things, and the nanotechnology is meant to reach these, as well, so it's not just us humans they are targeting.

Then we have the food. I would argue that all the major food distributors in the world put nano particles in the food, and here in the U.S., we have GMO food, as well--Genetically Manipulated Organisms... it's even in the name. So, we also get our dose of nanotechnology through what we eat and drink. Vegans, raw-fooders, and vegetarians think that so long as they eat directly from nature and plant their own food, they are fine, but the soil has nanotechnology in it, too, and so do the plants. Even if you plant your own food from scratch, it's not free from nanotechnology. But of course, it's better than what you buy in the store.

Now back to the vaccines. The following is based on my own research so far, and I may miss a few important points that I am still not aware of (it's a constant learning process), so take it for what it is.

Without any doubt, the vaccines comprise a lot of different ingredients, and the public will never be told exactly what is in them. But we can safely presume they include a lot of nanotechnology and bots. The goal of the Singularity Planners is to eventually completely replace the human blood cells with nanobots. This is also in my book, and it's not my theory; it comes from the horse's mouth and is no secret; it's public. That's what the "transmutation of humankind" stands for in my book title. I don't want to toot my own horn here, but if you haven't, you need to read the book. Even if it's a few years old, it's never going to be dated. It lays out the Singularity plan quite neatly and it's valid.

So, what will the vaccine bots do to us? Many people think the vaccines will kill us. Although there are, and will be more casualties, the purpose is not to kill people, in my opinion. Making people infertile? Yes, Mr. Gates! That's how they mainly will reduce the population. The agenda is quite the opposite: they are trying to create eternal physical life... cyborgs, remember? So, many people get it wrong. They are trying to beat death, not create death. People take their one or two doses of vaccine and think they're good to go. They get their vaccination pass and can start traveling and live more "normally." However, there are going to be boosters, just like with the flu vaccines, and if people don't take the boosters, they lose their pass and privileges that they regained by taking the first one or two shots. I personally think the flu vaccines have been a way to get people used to having annual vaccinations, so it will be easier to accept an annual COVID booster; it's just basic programming; old stuff. Keep in mind that the EL-ite plan decades ahead. That's what the Think Tanks and Bilderberger Meetings, etc., are about.

So, over time, our blood cells will be replaced with bots. It will take a few years of vaccinations and other methods, I believe, to get that done. It's not enough with one or two shots. Then, we have Mr. EL-on Musk's satellites to name another part of the agenda. They are working on creating a new human Mass Consciousness that is connected to the A.I. Cloud instead of the Universe we are currently connected to. In other words, humankind is being prepared for another jump down toward the Abyss.

There are truth-seekers who, for one reason or another, have felt forced to take the vaccine, and some of them are probably anxious about it. They might not have had any serious side effects, but what about long-term? Well, if my theory is correct, these first two shots are not going to make too much of a difference, other than that the person will have more nanotechnology in their bodies than before the shots. The real danger is for those who are still not awakened to the purpose of the Singularity Agenda. They will gladly take a hundred shots if they think they can avoid a bogus virus, and eventually, they will become completely controlled cyborgs within a contained Cloud consciousness.

But what about us, who have a relatively good grasp of who we are, immortal souls connected to Spirit? I would say that in the long-term, if we continue taking vaccines and comply with other methods on the agenda, our bodies will start adapting to the cyborglike existence, but we still have our minds, and we still know who we are. So long as the body can die, we can still leave this Patrix if we continue working on ourselves and stay curious and learn.

So, it's okay to take the vaccines, then? Well, first of all, my theory needs to be correct for the following to apply; this is just what makes sense to me. But let's say it's relatively correct. I would still advise people not to take the vaccines if they can avoid it. The purer our bodies are from the bombardment of nanotechnology, the better. On the other hand, I wouldn't go out in the wilderness and live a hermit life either, to speak in extreme terms, to avoid the vaccines. Also, some people do get sick, and there are deaths reported, so it is still like Russian roulette, apparently.

Ultimately, the situation the person is in must determine what to do. Weigh all thinkable options against each other if you feel you are painted into a corner regarding taking or not taking the shots, and do what you can to avoid them. If avoiding them will completely ruin your life or prevent you from having any kind of life you want, there is a tough decision to make...
