Welcome to the first July Q&A Session! Please send me more questions at wespenre2@gmail.com, and put Q&A in the subject line, so I won't miss your email.

Here are today's questions:

Question 1: Can lucid dreaming be used as a tool to help your awakening/gnosis and/or how does it fit into the picture of all the research you've done? Perhaps using it as a way to do shadow work and working on letting go of attachments? For example, some lucid dreamers would ask scary/dark dream figures what they represent, or "ask the subconscious" directly about certain things. Are there any risks with using lucid dreaming as a tool?

Comment: Lucid dreaming can be a useful tool with practice, to learn more about ourselves and the universe around us. When we dream, our souls and minds are always in the astral to some degree—we go out-of-body and into the astral when we sleep and start dreaming. When we realize we're dreaming and start interacting with our dreams, it's a great idea to start asking questions within the dream to see what answer we get and then ponder them when we wake up—if we remember the dream. Keep journals!

When we wake up from such a lucid dream, it's best to write everything down at once just so we remember. Dreams tend to fade away from our memory.

There is no risk with using lucid dreaming as a tool, from what I can see. If things will get too scary and crazy, the dreamer will wake up.

Question 2: I've heard someone talk about the malevolent powers that be as that guy in Willy Wonka and the Chocolate Factory—the evil one who wants the secret recipe—but in the end, the bad guy was actually in cahoots with Willy, so I think that's such an interesting idea to think about. Do you think that is how our whole world is set up? And ultimately the evil and good are on the same team and the evil weeds out the people who have less integrity and such? Because ultimately, we are all One, right? It's so fun to think about.

Comment: It is true that ultimately, we are all One. In the beginning, there was only ONE, which is you (or me, or anybody and anything—it's all the same). At one point, the ONE split to experience itself individually and from different angles—to learn more about itself. Now, we are individuals and will continue being so for an unforeseeable time ahead. This means, also ultimately, that we are all on the same “team,” but in this universe of individuated consciousness, we are not on the same team. Different experiences have led to different personalities, and in this construct, it has gone so far as to create polarity/duality. Something can't exist without it's opposite, but the Universe always tries to find equilibrium.

Although duality is not prevalent in Orion/the Greater Universe, good and evil exists there, as well, but not to the extent as it does here, and not with the same intensity. So, the short answer to your question is that good and evil are not on the same team in the universe where we participate.

Question 3: Are there beings on Gaia that are using Orion Technology in some capacity? I know that beings there are very close to Nature. I would love to visit Gaia in its entirety once I leave the Kenoma.

Comment: Yes, Orion technology is used to different degrees across the Universe—both within the Matrix and in Orion. In fact, the Invaders stole technology from Orion in the War of the Titans and have used it ever since in this Construct—both to manipulate us and to keep themselves alive. The Namlu'u/Aryans (i.e., we spirited humans) were created to be able to create in our turn without using technology. We can create “something out of nothing” by just using our minds and manifest it when not in our bodies, while other star races use technology to manage to do similar things.

Question 4: If flat earth is real, how come nobody sees a flat plane or a firmament when they astral project or when remote viewing?

Comment: When you're out in the astral, or in Orion, as well, for that matter, we see what we are prepared to see. If a person who practices astral travel has been manipulated into thinking Earth is a globe, that's what they'll see. This is also why so few astral travelers have encountered the Grid.

Question 5: I have my doubts that the moon is even a solid spherical object, instead just a projection of sorts from the rays of the black sun, reflecting off the firmament and making a light-based projection which would be the moon.

With that in mind, how exactly would it have been possible for Robert Monroe to have seen beings living on the moon, if the moon is not a solid or inhabitable land mass to begin with? Do you think Robert is controlled opposition? Or is it maybe that there is a level of subjectivity to remote viewing that keeps one from seeing things like a flat earth or a firmament dome.

Comment: Robert Monroe's experiences in the astral when it comes to the moon can be true, regardless of whether the moon is solid. The astral is a tricky place because it's thought responsive. Monroe was human, still among the living, and he was learning about astral travel, although he became more and more advanced over time. However, beings he met in the astral could on occasion easily have hoodwinked him and manipulated him by projecting something with their minds that Monroe thought was real—it's the same principle as shapeshifting. Souls can create entire worlds in the astral with their thoughts alone if they are spirited, and it appears as solid as any other solid object. I'm not saying this is the case with Monroe, but it's an option.

I think Monroe was genuine, but the CIA became interested in his experiences and started using them for their own purposes—usually to spy on other nations and to do research. If I recall correctly, Robert Monroe signed some kind of agreement with the CIA, but I don't think he understood what the CIA was going to use his experiences for. I could be wrong, but that's my perception about it.
