Hello, Wes Penre here. Time for a new Q&A. Please contribute with more questions at wespenre2@gmail.com, and put Q&A in the subject line. As usual, you can submit as many questions as you wish.

Here are today's questions and comments:

Question 1: Upon body death, do we cease our subconscious mind? And if so, would that not resolve most of what is wrong with us since pain and trauma are kept in the reactive subconscious mind?

Comment: We do not cease our subconscious mind upon death. When we die, we enter the astral plane, which is, we could say, a density slightly higher than the physical 3rd dimension/density. This means we gain some memories in the astral—particularly from our most recent lifetime—but previous lives are usually still not accessible. But it's not only because of density—it also has to do with personality. Every single lifetime, you are born with a clean slate, i.e., you usually remember nothing from the time before birth, even though soul memories are stored in our minds, but can't be accessed. So, you create a completely different personality every lifetime, formed by the reactions to your environment, what you learn during that lifetime, and the consequences of the choices you make. Therefore, you have very little in common with the people you were in so-called previous lives.

Mental abuse, such as what we experience when we have long-term relationships with narcissists, for example, also alters our personality because the goal of the narcissist is to give us their minds. In other words, they erase our real personality, which we developed before the abuse, and replaces it with their false self, i.e., their "personality." This is also famously mentioned by writer, Carlos Castaneda, when he said that the cosmic predators gave us their mind. Human narcissists work the same way. Also see recent videos by Professor Sam Vaknin and Richard Grannon, where this phenomenon is described in great detail. I will go deeper into this, and much more, in an upcoming book I'm planning to write, starting around New Year's.

Question 2: People say you must keep your frequency/vibration high in order to ascend/exit the matrix. This might mean NO SADNESS NO DEPRESSION NO SUFFERING NO PAIN since these states are considered low negative vibration states. When people die most are "suffering" from trauma, pain and are in a state of misery/broken-heartedness due to illness or accident.

How can people in this state keep their frequency/vibration high when they are overcome with suffering? They really can't help it.

Comment: It is true that we need to raise our vibrations in order to leave the Matrix through a hole in the Grid. This is for a particular reason: if we don't raise our vibrations, we won't be determined enough to leave. When we know that we are completely dedicated to leaving the Matrix, we are vibrating at the right frequency. There might be those who say they want to leave the Matrix, but when push comes to shove, out of fear, and by having attachments to this world, they will still go through the Tunnel of Light because that is more familiar and seems "safer" than to explore the unknown. If so, that person is not of the right vibration to leave the Matrix and needs additional emotional healing to overcome fear and trauma.

The human life on Earth is complicated, and so are our emotions. It is impossible to stay on a high frequency all the time here, and it's not required. What I explained above is what is required, as I see it. However, we want to leave the Matrix in a relatively good shape, so emotional healing is highly recommended. I will make a separate video about how to do that. It will be a very important one and pertains to basically all humans.

Question 3: How does consciousness get connected to the physical body that we operate/animate? Does the female WOMB/WOOMAN actually WOO the spirit into her womb by electromagnetic energy? Like a magnet? Soul LURE system?

Comment: The consciousness gets connected via technology used by the Invader Force. The soul, comprising trillions of tiny nano-sized soul fires then attach to the cells in the body and stay connected via a silver cord that is linked to the astral body. I have no information about exactly how this technology works.

Question 4: I frequently been having what I call epiphanies that there was something before Sophia became awake, what do you think these are alluding to? I mean, there's gotta be something before Sophia's awakening, a beginning before the beginning?

Comment: In the Wes Penre Papers (WPP), I discussed the 4% versus the 96% Universe. The majority of the 96% Universe is the Spiritual Universe, in the Gnostic texts called the Pleroma. This is Sophia's/the Orion Queen's home universe. There, no time exists, so from our perspective, She has always existed, just as Spirit has always existed. According to the Gnostics, Source/the Monad at one point emanated the Aeons, who we could say are split versions of the Monad, residing in the Spiritual Universe, and Sophia is one of them. I can't guarantee that the Gnostics were correct regarding that, and from what I learned during the creation of the WPP, only the Queen was discussed—no other "Aeons" were mentioned. So, it's a matter of discernment, I guess.

When you say there must be something before Sophia's creation, I understand what you mean, but we humans tend to think of things from our perspective, which includes linear time. Linear time does not exist outside this Earth Construct, so your question cannot be answered satisfactory because on one level, so-called "time" is simultaneous. There is no past or future, just a constant "now." This can be very difficult to comprehend.

Question 5: How do we know if we come from Marduk (Satan) and Ereshkigal genetic-wise? If Ereshkigal is the creator of the current day humans, then we have her DNA within us but what about our other DNA? Star races contributed here? What is the most common blood type here on earth? In the Wes Penre Papers (WPP) Level 5 you mention the O Blood type. What about the different blood types within the common man? Is our DNA "that" much different than the Global Elite's?

Comment: Our origins can theoretically be tracked to some degree through DNA tests and blood types, etc., but even if we issue such tests, we still don't know what we're looking for because we don't know what is what.

The most common blood type in the world is O+, carried by 39% of the world population. It would therefore make some sense that this is the original blood type in the Marduk/Ereshkigal experiment, and the other blood types might linger from earlier experiments. But to contradict myself, it could also be that blood types have nothing to do with it. The gods could have used different blood types simultaneously in the same experiment to create certain variations in traits or effects. We don't know. These days, everyone is mixed anyway.

It really doesn't matter whether a person is a direct product of Marduk and Ereshkigal's tinkering. All of us still possess homo sapiens sapiens bodies, and we are not keeping them when we leave this life or this Matrix for that matter. So, in that sense, it's irrelevant.

There are specific EL-ite bloodlines, and they are very strict with keeping these bloodlines pure. The DNA is slightly different, and these bodies can be more easily possessed and taken over by the Invaders. They also have a longer lifespan, for the most part. The same souls of the EL-ite are returning to the same pure bloodlines lifetime after lifetime, and have done so since the time of En.ki's "Garden of Eden," but they do not go through the recycling center and have their memories wiped, like we do. Therefore, they may have more memories of previous lives than we do, and at the least, their previous memories can be more easily retrieved by them being reminded by other cult members.

Various star races, such as the Sirians, also contributed with their DNA. In general, we may notice more dominant Sirian DNA in people who have a lot more body hair than average. This does not mean that these people are more aggressive or evil than those with other body types. I would suggest it has more to do with certain star races' "ownership" of our physical bodies. Their DNA contribution becomes their "brand," similar to how we are branding cows.
