Q&A Session #23, 2025
by Wes Penre, July 19, 2025

*****

Welcome, and thank you for your questions! Please send more to wespenre2@gmail.com, including 'Q&A' in the subject line, so I don't miss your email.

Please keep your questions as brief as possible. I receive too many lengthy emails, and I've noticed that I hesitate to include some of them because I don't have the time to condense them. Please keep your response as brief as possible. I understand that sometimes, keeping it short is not an option to convey your message. Just doing your best is good enough.

To explore any of my books, please visit Amazon.com, where you can find a collection of all my titles. Books are now translated into Spanish, German, Russian, and Estonian by different publishers, including Amazon.

For more details, please follow this link: <https://wespenrevideos.com/2024/08/28/wes-penre-books-published-in-multiple-languages/>.

German translations are also available on Amazon.de, which can help save on shipping costs if you're in Germany. This will be updated once a newly translated book is published anywhere.

Please note: If the question(s) you submit is/are omitted, it's usually for two reasons: there was no space to include all questions that week, so keep an eye open for one of the following Q&As. Alternatively, and for some reason, the question(s) did not fit the hallmark for a Q&A—perhaps too broad or complex to answer in this format. It's never because I think a question is “stupid.”

Unfortunately, I don't have time to watch videos people sometimes send me as part of the question. Instead, please take the part of the video that relates to the question and write that into the question. Also, please refrain from sending websites or lengthy PDF files I don't have time to read. When I receive these attachments and links, I must automatically disregard these questions unless I can comment on them without having to attend to the attachments.

Question #1: Hi Wes, can you please tell me what religion you were brought up with as a child, if any. Also, if your parents and/or siblings are still alive, do they share your view on the world?

Comment: I was fortunate enough to be brought up in a non-religious family. I can't remember one single discussion we had about religion, even though my parents never judged religious people, either—at least not in front of us kids. They wanted us to build our own beliefs, if any. I know that my father was an atheist, and my mother was agnostic.

My parents are no longer alive, but I have two younger sisters who are doing well. However, I was always the odd bird in the nest. My sisters, like my parents, don't care about faith or spiritual searching. Still, they completely accept me for who I am, knowing my lifelong thirst for knowledge and self-exploration, and have no problems with it. They don't read my nonfiction books, as they lack interest in metaphysics and the like. Still, they've read my fantasy trilogy, "Ismaril's Journey," and both loved it, quickly reading the whole thing, without knowing it is loosely based on my research. They are constantly asking me when my next novel will be published. Still, they don't like to discuss metaphysics at all.

Question #2: Why can't we just nanotravel outside the Grid instead of Nano traveling through the holes in the Grid? I'm saying this just in case the holes in the Grid are some sort of variation of the white tunnel or the different lights that are mentioned in the book after death.

Comment: It is because the soul must literally go through the Grid in some fashion to reach the other side, and this is a physical movement, even though we might not think of it that way, since we consider our sapiens body to be the "physical" self. Still, the soul is physical, too, but vibrates on a different frequency than the 3-D body. So, you can't just think yourself through the intense bioelectrical field we call the Grid without getting a severe electric shock that might knock you unconscious. The soul needs to travel through a hole in the Grid, which is the only way out of the Matrix I know of, unless we choose to go through En.ki's Seven Heavens (densities/dimensions) one by one. That may take millions of years, the way we count time, and there is still no guarantee we'll ever reach Orion that way.

The Tunnel of Light is different from the Grid, and you will notice the difference if the Tunnel is visible to you after the departure from your body. The Grid is a vibrating electric "fence" above you ("above" from your deceased body's perspective), and you will easily recognize the vibrant fence, in contrast to a single Tunnel of Light.

Question #3: Thank you for your work. You have said that we are born into the same bloodlines continuously. I don't resonate with this idea. Can you please explain how you came up with this idea? What happens when a bloodline ends, i.e., a couple doesn't have kids? If you say others related to this couple could continue the bloodline, then going backward, most of humanity will end up being related. I am unable to understand where a bloodline starts. Can you clarify?

Comment: The idea was discussed with my Contact during the WPP sessions, and it makes perfect sense to me. If we were incarnated into a random bloodline, and let's say you become a tribe member in the Amazon jungles in your next incarnation (nothing wrong with them. I'm using the example because it would be much different from your current life). That would completely confuse your spiritual path and make things much harder than they already are. Since you have no direct previous ancestry within that bloodline, except perhaps many thousands of years ago, when all bloodlines were one. Even though En.ki and his team make it very difficult for us to "evolve," they are bound by contract with Orion to let us graduate from this Experiment when we are ready to do so. The archontic gods devised a temporary solution, making graduation an extremely slow process for most people.

It's all about DNA, as I wrote in my book, "The Story of Isis and the War on Bloodlines." You are born with a blank slate each lifetime, i.e., with full amnesia, so you can't really evolve from soul memory alone since you remember next to nothing. You evolve because of your bloodline—your ancestry. "You've been there before," so to speak, and you inherit previous memories, traits, and ambitions from there—not only your traits, but each lifetime, your personality is based on the totality of the experiences stored in your DNA, but also on those of other people in your bloodline. Additionally, and perhaps primarily, you are influenced by your environment, caregivers, and the choices and experiences in your current life. All this combined becomes your personality. Thus, you get a new Matrix personality each lifetime. In your past life, you were someone else completely, but your "past" achievements still bleed through to a various degree—your personal achievements and those of your ancestors.

It may seem like pure luck if you achieve a higher level of awareness in one lifetime. What's the use if we die and don't remember our achievements? That's reasonable thinking, but whatever you do in this life affects your entire bloodline since there is no past, only an ever-changing present, and you bring your "past" with you in the present (see my new book, "The Nature of the Multiverse"). Suppose you were a serial killer in this life. In that case, it can have a profoundly negative impact on your entire DNA. In the next lifetime, you will encounter much greater challenges than this one, as you have affected your entire bloodline, at least 10-12 generations back, after which the impact becomes more diluted. If there is any karma, that is it. In this matrix, you are your bloodline. The bloodline is you—not your essence (which is Spirit), but your matrix Ego. This is why Orion is concerned about how we have "evolved" when we enter Orion. You are the person you have become when you exit through the Grid.

This is also something Barbara Marciniak's Pleiadians discuss. They confirm that you affect your bloodline, "past" and potential "future," by acting in the now, the present. On the contrary, if you spend your life on a self-exploratory path, that will also affect your bloodline, which you always carry with you.

Our homo sapiens bloodline started with Adam and Eve and spread from there, but you normally only affect what you might call your current bloodline about 10-12 generations back:

While your ancestors will always be related to you, the amount of their DNA you inherit becomes diluted with each generation. On average, you'll share about 50% of your DNA with each parent, 25% with each grandparent, 12.5% with each great-grandparent, and so on. By about 10-12 generations back, there will likely be very little, if any, of the original DNA from that ancestor remaining in your genetic makeup. (AI Google)

If your current direct bloodline ends (which it will in my case, since I have no children), and I were to choose to reincarnate, I would most likely do so through one of my sisters' bloodlines. If I had no siblings, I might incarnate in an uncle's or aunt's bloodline—whatever is closest to my own.

Question #4: Last week, when I ordered The Orion Book, Volume 2, I noticed an e-book offer for Elizabeth Clare Prophet's book Life After Death: What Really Happens in the Afterlife. The introduction says that the author is a world-renowned spiritual teacher and the author of several books. It concludes by saying: "This life-changing guide, written with clarity and compassion, shows you how to make the most of life's opportunities as you prepare for the ultimate journey."

Do you know anything about Elizabeth Clare Prophet? And what do you think of her and this book?

Comment: I have not read anything by Elizabeth Clare Prophet, so I can't comment, unfortunately.

Question #5: The above picture was shared in a Facebook group. At first, it made me laugh, but then it raised some questions.

Why is it that humans and their skin can't tolerate large amounts of sunlight? Is this due to the flawed Homo sapiens body created by En.ki out of ignorance, or was it actually designed this way on purpose?

Are you aware of how Homo sapiens bodies handled sunlight during the time of the Second Atlantis?

Could our bodies' intolerance to intense sunlight have something to do with Sirius A, Sirius B, and Sirius C?

If light is information, could it be that too much sunlight might trigger memory recall?

Comment: Strange, isn't it? We have learned that the first human was black. This may or may not be the case with homo sapiens, however. The reference to a black origin may very well be with the Aryans (the Namlú'u). The Bible, for example, may hint at the fact that Noah's sons had a mix of two skin colors: black and white, with Ham being the black one. Still, that is a matter of interpretation, since it's not completely certain that black refers to skin color in his case.

However, the question you raise has been discussed many times among scholars and everyday people. Why is this?

To me, it suggests that we don't truly belong here. The plants and animals are survivors of the Flood and were, therefore, present during the Atlantis era, alongside the Aryans. I'm positive the Aryans had no problem with sunlight and didn't get burned. They were constructed differently.

By the end of the Atlantic era (less than 2,000 years before Noah's Flood), En.ki and Isis created homo sapiens, which is an archontic creation with En.ki as the scientist behind it. We don't belong here, and because our physical bodies are not a part of the original planning, and En.ki could only create a diminished copy of En.lil's original humans (the Aryans), we have many physical flaws, and not tolerating too much sunlight is one of them. This in itself contradicts Darwin's theory of evolution, that we started as amoebas and eventually developed into homo sapiens. If this were the case, we would all tolerate sunlight.

Still, your theory that too much sunlight may trigger our memories could very well be valid, too. I don't know if that's the case, but it is profound and makes sense. If so, it means En.ki created us with sensitive skin for a reason.

Another thing to consider is that there are people, such as those in Africa, who spend their days in a hot sun, and their skin can withstand it. Wouldn't they be more enlightened than we pale-skinned humans, then? Who says they aren't? They are black and probably closer to the Aryan DNA than Caucasians are. "Civilization" is not enlightenment, except in the eyes of the EL-ite, but their definition of enlightenment is a technologically based civilization. The Enlightenment movement began with the Industrial Revolution, initiated by King Louis XIV of France in the late 1700s—a possible incarnation of Marduk. I wrote about this in "The Story of Isis and the War on Bloodlines".
