

Q&A Session #22, 2025
by Wes Penre, July 9, 2025
Traducción de Adela Kaufmann

Welcome, and thank you for your questions! Please send more to wespenre2@gmail.com, including 'Q&A' in the subject line, so I don't miss your email.

Please keep your questions as brief as possible. I receive too many lengthy emails, and I've noticed that I hesitate to include some of them because I don't have the time to condense them. Please keep your response as brief as possible. I understand that sometimes, keeping it short is not an option to convey your message. Just doing your best is good enough.

To explore any of my books, please visit Amazon.com, where you can find a collection of all my titles. Books are now translated into Spanish, German, Russian, and Estonian by different publishers, including Amazon.

For more details, please follow this link: <https://wespenrevideos.com/2024/08/28/wes-penre-books-published-in-multiple-languages/>.

German translations are also available on Amazon.de, which can help save on shipping costs if you're in Germany. This will be updated once a newly translated book is published anywhere.

Please note: If the question(s) you submit is/are omitted, it's usually for two reasons: there was no space to include all questions that week, so keep an eye open for one of the following Q&As. Alternatively, and for some reason, the question(s) did not fit the hallmark for a Q&A—perhaps too broad or complex to answer in this format. It's never because I think a question is “stupid.”

Unfortunately, I don't have time to watch videos people sometimes send me as part of the question. Instead, please take the part of the video that relates to the question and write that into the question. Also, please refrain from sending websites or lengthy PDF files I don't have time to read. When I receive these attachments and links, I must automatically disregard these questions unless I can comment on them without having to attend to the attachments.

Question #1: You say that the activation of Kundalini Energy could be dangerous or manipulative. How, then, should one go about awakening the Kundalini energy safely? I specifically want to use it to get out of my body with more ease. I already use Binaural Beats/Hemi sync, but for the most part, it is still difficult to get out, except for some exceptions. I also think that I can distinguish between the Lower Astral and the Higher Astral, but I have no way of choosing where to go when leaving the body at night.

Comment: What I meant when I wrote this was that if you activate the Kundalini and use it, make sure to have a clear intention of where you want to direct it, since these energies can be hijacked in the astral. I've heard many people work on activating it without any precise aim or purpose. Used and directed appropriately, the Kundalini activation can be an excellent tool for communicating with the spirit world and with our Highest Self. I'm sure it can also help to initiate OBEs.

Because everything is energy and vibration, as Tesla put it, this is precisely why people have such different experiences when they sleep or astral travel. As humans, we constantly fluctuate in frequency depending on our emotional state at a particular moment. When we leave the body, we leave it in the emotional and vibrational condition we are in at the exact moment of exit. If we're fearful, we experience a different reality than if we are calm, positive, and anticipating. Therefore, developing the ability to regulate our emotions is an excellent skill to cultivate.

Question #2: How do those wild tribes, who live in isolation—for example, in the jungles of the Amazon or on islands in the Pacific Ocean, whom modern rulers forbid anyone to visit, and who know nothing of the En.ki, of civilizations, or even of our world at all—fit into the global world order and the spiritual cycle of governance? They are not subject to any externally imposed systems of control, but live according to their own experience and instincts. If their world is entirely separated from ours, then what happens to them after death? How does their transition into the astral realm take place? Are they spirited—and if not, then what are they? How is their place defined within the larger spiritual system, the existence of which they themselves are unaware?

Comment: Spirited humans exist in all cultures and settings across the world. Isolated tribes are not different. There are most likely both spirited humans and NPCs in those communities, as well.

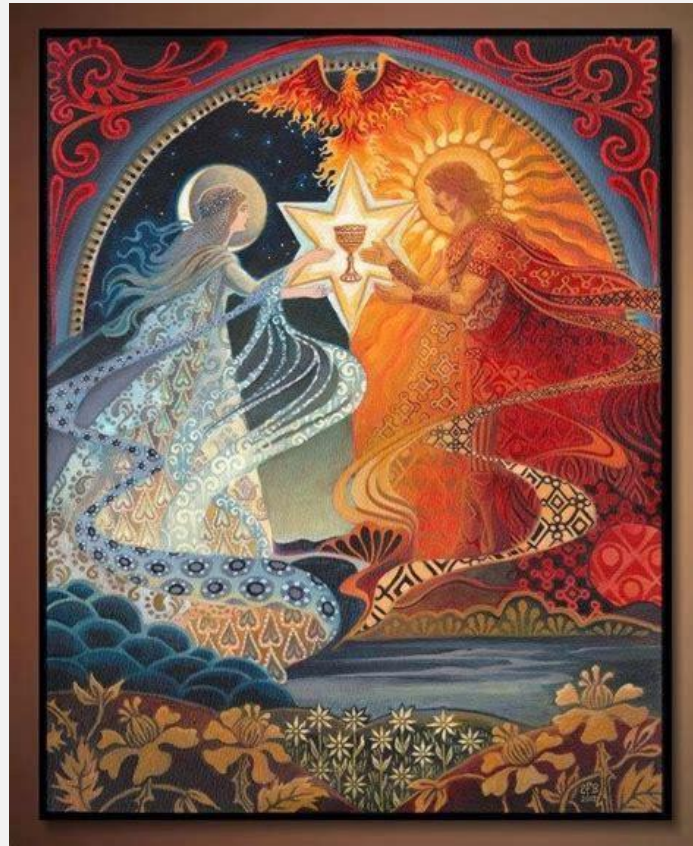

It's true that jungle tribes might never have seen civilization (lucky them), but they are still parts of the mass consciousness/the human soul group, i.e., the Grid Network. All humans, in that capacity, are ONE, although individuated, too. All cultures have their own strong beliefs that are manifesting in the astral as “real” places; that's a consequence of spirited human creation. Since we are androgynous, we manifest. We possess both feminine and masculine energy, regardless of gender.

When a person from a jungle tribe dies, they have their own beliefs about what will happen—most tribes seem to believe in an afterlife. The chances are that they might first experience the place they believe is their destination, or they simply enter the Tunnel of Light right away and get recycled. OBE and NDE witnesses, and those who have had afterlife regression therapy, often say it can go either way. Some deceased souls first linger in the astral realm for a while, and others get recycled fairly quickly.

So, tribe members are not treated differently from anybody else. Just like the rest of us, they get recycled into their own bloodline, e.g., their grand- or great-grandchildren.

Since there are still tribes that know nothing about civilization, the EL-ite somehow needs to reach them as well, because of the Singularity and the new digital transmutation into the Nanoverse. How they will do that, I don't know. It is even possible that the EL-ite disregard or discard them altogether. Silicon Valley Singularity gurus have never mentioned these tribes, to my knowledge. If someone else has heard about this, please let me know in the comment section or via email at wespenre@proton.me.

Question #3: You said that when we get out of here, if we all meet in Orion, which I agree with, we can wait for others. But I thought since there's no time there as we know it, how would that wait be? And how would we know when that person arrives?

Comment: Time does exist in Orion, too, since Orion is part of the physical universe, albeit isolated from the archontic realm, also known as the Sirian Empire (and the Kenoma in Gnostic traditions), in which we live. An illusion of time is created when there is a distance between two or more objects. We call that space (more accurate terms would be the Spirit Field, the VOID, or the cosmic waters).

We experience reality from a continuing NOW moment—present time. Our core being, Spirit, is timeless and static (motionless). Even here, in the physical realm, we are timeless at our core, yet we experience events in the physical theater. What we consider the past didn't happen “before.”

Wes Penre Productions

Everything happens in a continuous present moment. Therefore, time is not linear. What you experience in this “second” you might consider being in the past a minute later. It’s not. It’s still in the present: there is a new present with each experience, however small that experience is.

The simplest way to think about it is to consider time as vertical, rather than linear. All experiences build upon each other—past, present, and potential futures, where memories and experiences are like strawberries you stick on a vertical straw, where you are the straw. You carry these berries with you wherever you go. They are all in the present. You can’t be anywhere else than in the present. However, you can perceive past and present on a linear timeline, but that is just an illusion and a mass agreement, which even contradicts scientific principles. Even Einstein began to realize this.

So, you go to Orion, start creating, having a much more accurate perception of time than in the Matrix. In a present moment of yours, you get a telepathic message from somebody calling you. Someone is reaching out to other Aryans (Namlú’u), and those Aryans get the message. It doesn’t matter if you are a billion light-years from the person who just arrived in Orion. Distance is of no consequence since Avatars can move instantly at the speed of thought.

In conclusion, you meet others by reaching out to them. When you’re new to Orion, you might want to reach out to other Aryans telepathically who got there before you.

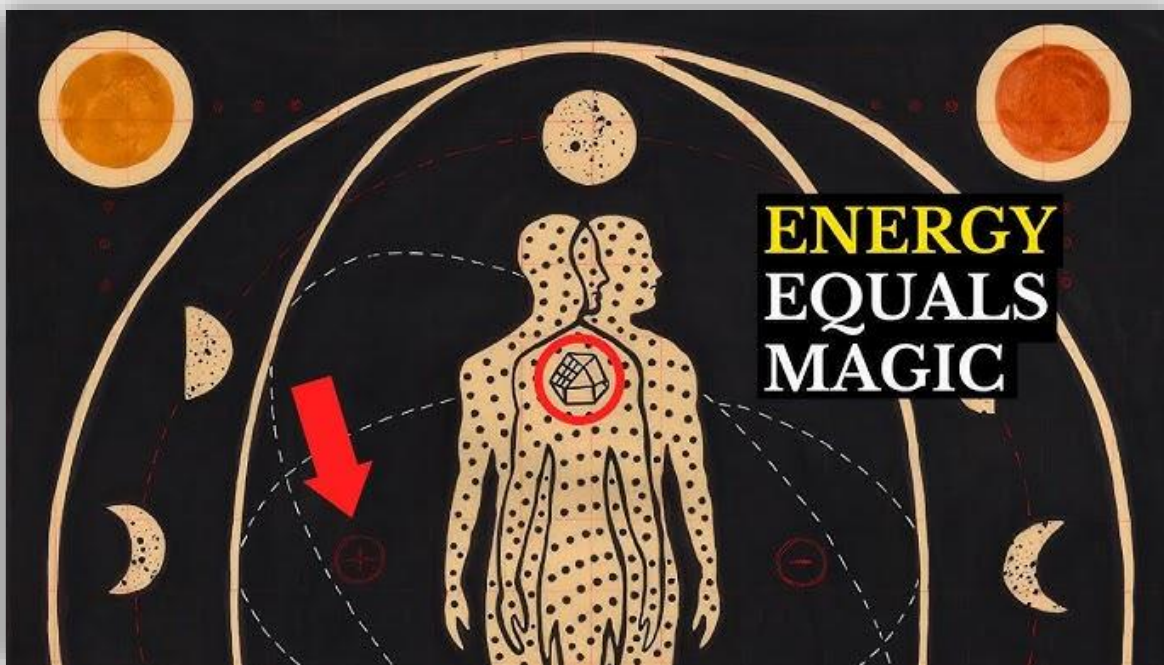

Question #4: If Marduk inhabited Jesus's body, can you explain the stories of people being in the presence of what they call demons, and they say things like, "In Jesus's name, demon be gone!" and the demons go away... They say that saying his name has great power against what they call demons, whatever they are. How is this working for them?

Wes Penre Productions

Comment: Christians, and many other people in general, usually look at Jesus as the Savior and the Son of God. People who visit this blog usually know that God is not who people think he is. In my two recent books, "Battles Between Shadow and Light" and "The Nature of the Multiverse," I discussed the Jesus phenomenon at some length.

Yes, Marduk hijacked the entire Jesus story, pretending to be the Son of the Holy Trinity. The Son of the Holy Trinity is the Human (see the Gnostic texts). The Jesus Story is our story, given to us in metaphors and analogies, but Marduk inverted the entire Holy Trinity concept to point at an archontic trinity instead, where Marduk plays the role of the First Human (the Son of the Holy Trinity).

For humans, the name Jesus is loaded with energy and carries multiple meanings. Christians have a strong faith in Jesus, and Gnostics understand that humans are Jesus, for example. Since we are creators, faith can be very powerful when putting a group consciousness in the same direction. Whatever Jesus means for the person who prays to him or uses him for protection, usually has a firm conviction that Jesus is more powerful than the demon. The demons don't yield because of the name but because of the conviction (energetic spiritual power) in the intention behind the name Jesus. It's all about energy.

Question #5: You rarely talk about magic, what about it?

Comment: We are back to energy again. There is nothing magical with magic—nothing mystical. In the fantasy genre, the authors make up their own magic systems that can be very interesting for the plot and make sense in the context, but it's just that—it's made up. In reality, everything is energy. A magician is simply someone who has trained themselves to control and direct energy as they wish. Some “magicians” have even trained themselves so hard that they can manifest something from their minds into the physical realm quite instantly. Outside the Matrix, this happens all the time, but it can be done in here, too, with the right training.
